Since the introduction of economic reforms in 1978, China’s economy has been one of the world’s fastest-growing. As of 2016, China is the world’s second-largest economy by nominal GDP and largest by purchasing power parity. Currently, as the engine of the international economy and the factory of worldwide industry, China is the largest developing country in the world. Covering the third largest territory in the world, she owns more than five-thousand-year history with the population of over 1.3 billion. Her extensive inland offers the rich and colorful culture and customs. She is the home and cradle of dragon, papermaking, printing, compass, powder, the Great Wall, terra cotta warriors and calligraphy, etc. She is the hometown of Confucianism and Taoism.

China covers an area of 9.6 million square kilometers and 18,000-kilometer continental coastline and owns 34 provincial-level administration zones. Additionally, the natural philosophy also shows her charms in mental depth. China is an elegant country for her traditional accumulation in culture, politics, economy, diplomacy and lifestyle. To some extent, she is hard to understand in comparison with western world. But with her long history and stories, she is surely different from western world. As one of the cradles of miracles and wonders, China is always the top priority for you if you want to feel the freshness and mysteriousness.
China is one of the four countries with time-honored and splendid history and civilization all around the world. Five-thousand-year recorded history offers diverse evidences to show her most-advanced civilization on earth. China’s characters are the oldest characters with endless dynamics and popularity. They are still being extensively used and welcomed all the time when other old languages die out. Furthermore, they are also quickly popularized and accepted in other countries as the Confucius Institutes are established in sequence in the world. The movement of learning Chinese has been quickly launched and enlarged. It is the first language spoken by the largest population and one of the five official languages in the UN. Thanks to China’s written language, most of the important historical events were recorded: China’s culture could be maintained in her characters; the intangible materials and visible heritages could be succeeded and understood by new generations. China takes a very important position in culture, history, art, architecture and customs. What’s more, the diversity of China’s local thought and culture characterizes her overall culture and features.

Chinese Ethnic Groups

China’s population is over the other countries in the world, and the efforts of different ethnic groups contribute a lot to her glorious and diverse historic achievements. As a large united multi-national state, China is composed of 56 ethnic groups. Among them Han Chinese accounts for 91.51% of the overall Chinese population and the other 55 make up the remaining 8.49% according to the Sixth National Population Census of 2010. As the combined population of these other minorities is far fewer than that of the Han people, they form the 55 minorities of China.

These ethnic groups share China’s vast land but at the same time many live in their individual communities. The relationships between them have been formed over many years.

Chinese Han People

With a population of 1.2259 billion, the Han Chinese can be found in almost every part of China. However, they mainly live in the middle and lower reaches of the Yellow River, Yangtze River, the Pearl River and also in the Northeast Plain Region (Songliao Plain). They form the largest ethnic group within China and also the largest in the world. The Han people have their own distinctive way of life.

Minority ethnic groups

Although they make up only a small proportion of the overall Chinese population, the fifty-five minority ethnic groups are distributed extensively throughout different regions of China. The regions where they are most concentrated are Southwest China, Northwest China and Northeast China. No matter whether it is Inner Mongolia, Xinjiang, Ningxia, Guangxi, Tibet, Yunnan, Guizhou, Gansu, Hubei or other provinces, one can find Chinese minorities. From the areas listed above, the greatest number of minorities can be found in Yunnan Province where 25 ethnic groups live. Zhuang has more than 16 million people accounting for the largest among the minority ethnic groups.

In order to ensure that the 56 Chinese ethnic groups live together in harmony, the government introduced a series of policies including ones to secure the equality and unity of ethnic groups, give regional autonomy to ethnic minorities and promote respect for the faith and customs of ethnic groups. Among these the policy of regional autonomy for minorities is the most fundamental. Under this policy, five autonomous regions, Inner Mongolia, Xinjiang, Guangxi, Ningxia and Tibet, as well as numerous autonomous prefectures, counties, nationality townships and towns have been set up. With guidance from the Chinese government, the minorities in areas that have been given regional autonomy are entitled to deal with their own affairs. Together with the Han people, the Chinese minorities are making great efforts to build a prosperous China.

The Han people

Han people originally ruled and influenced China during the Han Dynasty, beginning in 206 BC. Arts and science flourished during that time, which was often referred to as the Golden Age of China. This period introduced Buddhism, saw the spread of Confucianism and Taoism and further developed the use of Chinese characters in writing. This was also the start of the Silk Road route that established trade between China and many nations far to the west. The Yellow River in China is considered by the Han people as the cradle of their civilization, from where Han culture began and spread outwardly.

Chinese Names

Family Name

Altogether some 22,000 family names have been used in China, but over time some of them have become reserved and only 3,500 are commonly used nowadays. The most popular three are Li, Wang and Zhang, respectively occupying about 7.9%, 7.4% and 7.1% of the whole Chinese population.

Compound Surname

A Chinese compound surname is a Chinese surname using more than one character. Many of these surnames derive from noble and official titles, professions, place names and other areas, to serve for a purpose. Some are originally non-Han, while others were created by joining two one-character family names. Only a few of these names (e.g. Ouyang, Shangguan, Sima, Situ) survive in modern times.

Yangtze River and the Yellow River

Yangtze River

Winding about 3,964 miles, Yangtze River is the largest river in China and the third largest river in the world after the Nile in Africa and the Amazon in South America. Originating from the Tanggula Range in Qinghai Province in western China, it traverses eleven provinces and cities from west to east, including Qinghai, Tibet, Sichuan, Yunnan, Chongqing, Hubei, Hunan, Jiangxi, Anhui, Jiangsu and Shanghai. Finally, it pours into the East China Sea at Shanghai.

As the largest water system in China, Yangtze River is historically, economically and culturally important to the country. It has numerous tributaries including Min River, Han River, Jialing River, Gan River and Huangpu River. The Three Gorges Dam on the river is the largest dam project and hydropower station in the world.

Generally, people consider the river a dividing line between North China and South China. Areas to the north and the south of the river have many differences in climate, scenery and economy. The Yangtze River is rich in breathtaking scenery and diverse culture.

The Yangtze’s gorges are the highlights on the river’s course. Tiger Leaping Gorge, on the Upper Yangtze, is the deepest gorge in the world, with mountains towering 4,000 meters (13,000 ft) above it, and steep cliffs of 2,000 meters (6,600 ft) on its sides. The Three Gorges on the Yangtze’s middle reaches are famously beautiful, with relaxing cruises and pretty side gorges to be explored.

The Yellow River

The Yellow River is one of China’s major rivers, second only in length and importance to the Yangtze River. The Yellow River begins in West China’s Qinghai Plateau then wanders around northern China until it empties into the Bohai Sea in Shandong Province.

While the river runs through some beautiful scenery, it is not conducive to the multi-day cruise that the Yangtze is famous for, though short cruises are always a possibility on major cities along the river’s route to the sea. The river runs turbulently through deep gorges in West China. Along the way, the river picks up the colored silt that gives it its name as the current becomes smoother as it moves into East China. The silt is hard on boat engines as well as the turbines of hydroelectric plants that span the river.

Before there weren’t bridges and motor boats, the Chinese crossed the river on rafts, usually made from specially-treated pig and sheep skins that were inflated and then tied together. About 9 to 12 skins were used on each raft, which usually carried no more than four or five people. Sometimes the skins were lashed to a simple wooden frame to make the raft more floatable.

Mount Emei

Mount Emei is located in Leshan City, Sichuan Province, Southwest China. Mount Emei is a World Heritage Site listed by UNESCO and a well-known summer destination and also a sacred Buddhist haven.

The Emei mountain is characterized by lofty ancient trees, impressive waterfalls, pristine brooks and numerous Buddhist temples. The mountain enjoys great popularity among Buddhists in China. Every morning, streams of Buddhism pilgrims armed with joss sticks conquer the steep stairs of the mountain and swarm into the countless temples. The numerous monkeys on the mountain are also a notable feature.

Mount Wudang

Mount Wudang is one of the most famous Daoist mountains in China. Also known as Taihe mountain, it is situated in Hubei Province near Shiyan city. There are 72 peaks in the area, as well as 36 sheer cliffs and overhanging rocks, 24 ravines and 11 caverns. The highest peak and temple in the range is Jinding, which rises to an elevation of 1,612 meters.

As the largest existing Daoist complex, Mount Wudang has been built up over several centuries. The first temples on Mount Wudang were constructed during the Tang Dynasty. By that time Daoism had become a state religion, coexisting with both Buddhism and Confucianism.

China’s Political System

The people’s congress system is China’s fundamental political system. The Constitution of the People’s Republic of China (PRC) provides that state power belongs to the people. The National People’s Congress (NPC) and local people’s congresses at all levels are organs representing the people in exercising state power.

The people’s congresses have four main functions and powers: legislation, supervision, appointment and removal of officials and making decisions on major issues. These functions are a major reflection of the way the Chinese people exercise their power as masters of the state through the people’s congress system.

Multi-Party Cooperation and Political Consultative System

Multi-party cooperation and political consultation under the leadership of the Communist Party of China (CPC) constitute the basic party system in China. It was jointly created and developed by the CPC and other democratic parties in the long-standing process of China’s revolution, construction and reform. The system, which was conceived in the democratic revolution period and was established after the founding of the PRC in 1949, has made great headway after the Third Plenary Session of the 11th CPC Central Committee held in 1978.

Multi-Party Cooperation

China’s party system is distinct from the multi-party or two-party systems in Western capitalist countries, as well as the one-party system in a few countries. Its evident features are as follows: the CPC acts as the ruling party while, under the leadership of the CPC, other parties participate in the discussion and management of state affairs, in cooperation with the CPC. Cooperative relations between the CPC and other parties are based on the principle of “long-term coexistence and mutual supervision, treating each other with all sincerity and sharing weal and woe.”
The Chinese People’s Political Consultative Conference

Chinese People’s Political Consultative Conference (CPPCC) exercises the functions of political consultation, democratic supervision and participating in the administration and discussion of state affairs. The CPC and governments at all levels consult the CPPCC on fundamental policies and important issues in political, economic, cultural and social affairs before a decision is adopted and during the implementation of such decisions, so as to heed and canvass a wide range of opinions. This is a key link for the CPC and the governments at all levels to ensure that decision-making is scientific and democratic.

System of Ethnic Regional Autonomy

The system of ethnic regional autonomy is a basic political system of China. Ethnic autonomous areas in China are divided into three levels, namely, autonomous regions, autonomous prefectures and autonomous counties. Now, China has established 155 ethnic autonomous areas, including five autonomous regions, 30 autonomous prefectures and 120 autonomous counties.

The National Flag of China

The national flag of the People’s Republic of China is the five-star red flag. The red color of the flag is the symbol of the revolution. In the upper-left corner of the flag there are five-pointed yellow stars, of which the big one represents the Communist Party of China and the four small ones represent the people of four groups of the country.

The design of four small stars surrounding a big one signifies the close unity of the Chinese people under the leadership of the Communist Party of China. The flag was first raised in Tiananmen Square on October 1, 1949, the moment the formal announcement that the People’s Republic of China was founded.

National Emblem of the People’s Republic of China

National emblem of the People's Republic of China is the symbol of sovereignty of China. It contains the national flag of the People’s Republic of China, Tiananmen, gear wheel and ears of grain. Tiananmen is under the light of five stars and they are encircled by ears of grain and with a gear wheel below.

The five stars mean the unity of the Chinese people under the leadership of the Communist Party of China. It is Tiananmen where the founding ceremony of the People's Republic of China was held. The ears of grain and gear wheel represent the peasantry and working class respectively. The whole national emblem shows that the People’s Republic of China is a socialist state led by the working class and based on the worker-peasant alliance.

The Development of Civilization in China

China is an East Asian country with a large territory, a huge population and an ancient history. With written records dating back 4,000 years, it is recognized as one of the four great ancient civilizations of the world, together with ancient Egypt, Babylon and India. Moreover, China is the only ancient civilization that has continued to this very day.

The first light of Chinese civilization revealed itself 7,000 to 8,000 years ago. Archaeological studies have revealed that around 5,000 years ago the Chinese entered the stage of patriarchal society. Not only did villages begin to appear but also the initial forms of cities began to become evident. Extensive communities indicated that the population at the time had already reached a fairly large size and agriculture had made great headway.

During the Xia Dynasty, 4,000 years ago, China entered the period of slave society. The Shang Dynasty, which replaced the Xia, saw the height of bronze culture, when superb smelting and casting techniques brought forth beautiful wares made of bronze. Pottery making also developed very rapidly with the appearance of primitive pottery wares. Sericulture and silk weaving reached maturity at this time.

From 475 BC to the end of the 19th century, China went through a long feudal period. Before the 15th century, China was one of the most powerful countries in the world, occupying a leading position in the development of productivity and technology. Ancient China enjoyed a developed agriculture and advanced irrigation system, an independent tradition of medicine and advanced botanical knowledge. China’s four great inventions, namely, the compass, gunpowder, movable type printing and papermaking, not only changed the world but also accelerated the evolution of world history. Besides, China was rich in ceramics and silk textiles which were great inventions that exerted a great impact worldwide.

Joseph Needham, a historian of China’s science and technology and professor at Cambridge University, once said Western civilization did not begin until the era of Columbus, and China had left the Europeans far behind in science and technology before that time.
Unfortunately, the country’s feudal bureaucratic system held back science and inventions from making further progress, and prevented Chinese society from developing modern science, resulting in China staying long in the experimental stage in science and technology.

Modern China is experiencing a completely new era in which respect for science and inventions and encouraging creativity have become the guiding principles of society. Looking back at the contributions China’s civilization has made to the world, we have reason to believe that a more prosperous and stronger China will surely make new contributions to the civilization of mankind.

Agriculture in China

As early as the Qin Dynasty, the Luoyues in south China cleared jungle land and developed cultivation and crop irrigation. In what is now Xinjiang, grain, mulberry trees, hemp, grapes and other crops were already being grown by minority peoples 2,000 years ago. Crops such as sorghum, maize, cotton, sesame, grape, watermelon, cucumbers and carrots were introduced into the central areas from the “Western Regions”. During the Tang-Song period 1,000 years ago, the people in Yunnan developed water conservancy and irrigation projects on a large scale at Changshan, Dali and Dianchi.

Administrative Divisions in China

The current administrative divisions of China are province, county (city) and township. The country is divided into provinces, autonomous regions, municipalities directly under the central government, and special administrative regions. At present, China is divided into 23 provinces, five autonomous regions — each with a designated minority group, four municipalities directly under the central government and two special administrative regions, which enjoy a degree of political autonomy. Mainland China can be generally grouped into seven regions, including North China, East China, Northeast China, South China, Central China, Northwest China and Southwest China.
